FY 2007 FOIA – Request Log

Finalized 05/18/07	010	05/18/07	05/28/07	Direct	regarding a Union organization releasing or publishing the medical status and attendance irregularities to its members. This is one time incident. The organization never asked for the employees approval or consent, and was done with malicious intent. This employee was subsequently, probably indirectly, eventually disciplined by the company he is employed. Would this constitute a violation of the Privacy Act? The work status and attendance of an individual is not something that that the employees would have a need to know.
